Introduction

The Redevelopment Authority of the County of Fayette (RACF) is the principle agency in Fayette County responsible for community development and single-family affordable housing activities. Established in 1949, the Authority provides general community development services and administers several programs on behalf of the County and its municipalities. In addition to the Weatherization Program, the Authority also administers other programs which include:

- Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) Program
- Homeowner Rehabilitation Program
- Homeownership Assistance Program
- Lead Hazard Control Program

Overview of Weatherization Program

The Redevelopment Authority's Weatherization Program started in 1975 and was one of the first few weatherization programs in Pennsylvania. The program provides assistance to low-income households for energy efficiency improvements, often reducing both energy consumption and costs by as much as 23%. This assistance is provided by the Authority's experienced, state-certified in-house staff of Weatherization Technicians and subcontractors.

With funding from the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP), the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) Weatherization Assistance Program, and various local utility companies, the Authority's Weatherization Program has been able to assist over 10,000 households throughout Fayette County. As with other programs administered by the Authority, while the LIHEAP and DOE funding are Federal resources, they are provided to the County through Pennsylvania's Department of Community and Economic Development (DCED).

Explanation of the Weatherization Program

Energy reduction assistance begins with a Weatherization Auditor performing an energy audit and basic furnace safety check. This audit will provide the Installation Technicians with information needed to decide the most cost effective measures to perform on each dwelling. Some conservation measures consist of insulation and ventilation in the attic or other unheated areas, insulating water heaters, insulating waterlines in unheated areas, replacement of broken glass and weather-stripping of doors. The Technicians will also utilize a blower door to find and reduce outside air infiltration and heat loss. If needed, a heating contractor will perform a furnace cleaning and tune up, a follow-up safety inspection or make repairs to heating systems.

Mobile homes also receive a computer guided audit, air sealing, water heater wrap and heating system clean/tune-up and safety check. Additional measures can include ceiling insulation, belly insulation, interior caulking, vent fan repairs and window or door replacements. Minor repairs to ensure safety could be performed on houses or mobile homes.

Once installed, these energy saving measures will help to reduce your heating and cooling costs for years to come. All customers will receive energy education. This program is available to owners and renters alike.
